Understanding Apartheid is one of the first resources for schools that presents an in-depth examination of apartheid. Developed by the Apartheid Museum, it explores the origins of apartheid, how apartheid was implemented and its effects on every aspect of people's lives – both black and white.

The Learner's Book covers the following topics in the current Senior Phase Social Sciences and FET History curricula (Grades 8-12):

- different approaches to explaining apartheid
- industrialization and the foundations of apartheid
- segregation as policy
- the implementation of apartheid
- non-violent protest in the 1950s
- repression from the 1960s to the 1980s
- protest in the 1970s and the Soweto Uprising of 1976
- reform and intensification of resistance in the 1980s
- the transition to democracy.

Strong teacher support is provided in the Teacher's Book:

- clear guidelines based on the NCS for Senior Phase Social Sciences and the FET History NCS
- cross-curricular links
- answers to all activities
- further background information for teachers
- ideas for continuous assessment
- extension activities
- practical planning tools and rubrics
- an overview for teaching the topic across the high school curricula.

This book is accompanied by six full-colour posters for the classroom.
